1 2 3 4 5 6 7 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON 8 AT SEATTLE 9 KENNY CORCORAN, CASE NO. C21-0001JLR 10 Plaintiff, ORDER GRANTING MOTION 11 FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT v. 12 TIM GERVAIS, et al., 13 Defendants. 14 15 I. INTRODUCTION Before the court is in personam Defendant Tim Gervais's motion for summary 16 judgment. (Mot. (Dkt. # 28); Reply (Dkt. # 31).) Plaintiff Kenny Corcoran opposes the 17 18 motion in part. (Resp. (Dkt. # 30).) Although Mr. Corcoran concedes that he has received all payments he is due for wages, maintenance, and cure, he asserts that his 19 negligence and unseaworthiness claims must proceed to trial. (Id. at 1.) The court has considered the motion, all materials submitted in support of and in opposition to the motion, and the governing law. Being fully advised, the court GRANTS Mr. Gervais's motion for summary judgment in its entirety and DISMISSES this action with prejudice.

20

21

II. BACKGROUND

Because Mr. Corcoran concedes that Mr. Gervais has "made all required payments of wages, maintenance[,] and cure" (Resp. at 1), the court sets forth below only the factual background relevant to Mr. Corcoran's negligence and unseaworthiness claims.

A. Factual Background

Mr. Gervais is the owner of the purse seine fishing vessel F/V WOLVERINE ("the Vessel"). (See Ans. (Dkt. # 10) ¶ 4.) Mr. Corcoran joined the crew of the Vessel in Chignik, Alaska, on July 27, 2019, and worked on the Vessel until August 30, 2019. (Corcoran Dep.² at 26:11-15, 56:22-57:1.) He brought with him commercial fishing gear, a pair of XtraTuf boots, and 14 or 15 pairs of socks. (Id. at 31:2-32:18.) The Vessel had a working diesel stove where crew members, including Mr. Corcoran, would dry their boots and socks. (Id. at 38:8-24.) Mr. Corcoran testified that he never ran out of dry socks when he was on the Vessel, that he was never prevented from changing his socks, and that no one forced him to wear wet boots. (Id. at 41:13-42:7, 48:2-4.)

17

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

18

19

20

21

22

reference, the court cites directly to the page and line number of Mr. Corcoran's deposition.

concludes that oral argument would not be helpful to its disposition of the motion, see Local

¹ No party requests oral argument on the motion (see Mot. at 1; Resp. at 1) and the court Rules W.D. Wash. LCR 7(b)(4).

² Both parties have submitted excerpts of the transcript of Mr. Corcoran's deposition. (Beard Decl. (Dkt. # 29) ¶ 2, Ex. A; Merriam Decl. (Dkt. # 30-2) ¶ 2, Ex. 1.) For ease of

In about mid-August, however, Mr. Corcoran's feet began to hurt while he was working aboard the Vessel. (Id. at 42:8-20.) He testified that the crew would catch sets of jellyfish that were so large that "jellyfish and water and slime . . . would get all in the boots every single day, every single set." (Id.) As a result, even if he changed his socks in between sets, his boots would be filled with jellyfish tentacles and his socks would again get wet when the crew caught the next set. (Id.) About seven or eight days before he left the Vessel, Mr. Corcoran told Mr. Gervais that his feet were "starting to get real bad." (Id. at 47:11-15, 48:5-8.) Mr. Gervais suggested using the boot dryer, but according to Mr. Corcoran, his boots were "never too wet" and the real problem was that jellyfish were getting into his boots. (Id. at 47:19-48:1, 48:9-16.) Mr. Corcoran told a fellow crewman that he "didn't know how much longer [he] could take" working with sore feet. (Id. at 51:6-23.) On August 30, 2019, the Vessel was delivering her catch to a tender vessel. (Id. at 53:4-13.) After hearing that 20-foot waves were predicted for the next day, Mr. Corcoran decided that he would not be okay to continue fishing because his feet hurt so badly. (Id. at 54:8-21.) Mr. Corcoran told Mr. Gervais that he could not fish another day and that his feet were so swollen that he couldn't take off his boots. (Id. at 55:11-25.) He caught a ride on the tender vessel and returned to Chignik. (Id. at 56:22-57:1.) On August 31, 2019, Mr. Corcoran saw Community Health Aide Trainee Rosanna McArthur at the Bristol Bay Area Health Corporation clinic in Chignik Bay. (Beard Decl. ¶ 4, Ex. C ("Patient Encounter Form").) Ms. McArthur noted that Mr. Corcoran presented with "painful, swollen, red feet" and that the problem had started two weeks

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

21

prior. (Id. at 1.) She also wrote that Mr. Corcoran told her that he had "been wearing boots a lot, and in wet boots for a long time; not being able to dry them out or keep them dry" and that "[j]ellyfish could have got through socks and effected [sic] skin." (Id. at 2.) She assessed that Mr. Corcoran was suffering from a "fungus skin infection (Athlete's Foot)" and a "severe infection under the skin (Trench Foot)." (Id. at 1.) Ms. McArthur communicated with a doctor who was off-site, and prescribed Mr. Corcoran an antibiotic and an anti-fungal cream to treat his feet, along with Tylenol as needed for pain. (Id.; Corcoran Dep. at 60:1-18.) He did not receive a bill for the clinic visit, nor did anyone recommend any future treatment for his feet. (Corcoran Dep. at 74:22-75:9.)

Mr. Corcoran testified that he believed that his foot problems were caused because Mr. Gervais's boat setup "has it³ really high" so that it could hold more fish, which in turn meant that it would "hold more jellyfish which gets above the knees," causing jellyfish to get into his boots. (Id. at 72:15-73:7; see also id. at 73:25-74:4 (stating that there was nothing else wrong with the boat that caused the issues with his feet).) He also testified, however, that the boat needed to be that way so that it could hold more salmon. (Id. at 72:25-73:12.) He also stated that Mr. Gervais didn't do anything wrong to cause the issues with his feet. (Id. at 73:13-24.)

B. Procedural Background

Mr. Corcoran filed his complaint in this matter on January 2, 2021, against Mr. Gervais in personam and the Vessel in rem. (Compl. (Dkt. # 1) at 1.) He alleged claims

³ It is not clear from Mr. Corcoran's testimony what specific portion of the Vessel was "really high." (See id. at 72:15-73:7.)

for negligence, unseaworthiness, and unpaid wages under the Jones Act and general maritime law. (See generally id.)

On July 15, 2021, the court entered a scheduling order in which it set the deadline to amend pleadings on October 19, 2022, and the trial date on April 17, 2023. (Sched. Ord. (Dkt. # 13).) Mr. Gervais filed the instant motion for summary judgment on December 15, 2022. (Mot.) The motion is now ripe for decision.

III. ANALYSIS

Because Mr. Corcoran concedes that Mr. Gervais has paid him all of the wages, maintenance, and cure to which he alleges he was entitled (Resp. at 1), the court GRANTS Mr. Gervais's motion for summary judgment on Mr. Corcoran's claims for unpaid wages and for maintenance and cure (see Mot. at 14-18). With respect to his negligence and seaworthiness claims, Mr. Corcoran alleged that he "was forced to wear boots which were continually wet inside" and suffered injuries to his feet as a result. (Compl. ¶ 6.) He further alleged that these injuries were caused by the unseaworthiness of the vessel; the negligence of the defendants . . . and the failure of the defendants to provide a reasonably safe place to work in one or more of the following respects: Not providing reasonable accommodations with which to dry the inside of footwear or providing alternative footwear that was dry inside.

(Id. ¶ 7.) In his response, however, he asserts that his injuries resulted from jellyfish getting into his boots while he worked. (See generally Resp.) Below, the court sets forth the summary judgment standard and then considers Mr. Gervais's motion for summary judgment on Mr. Corcoran's negligence and unseaworthiness claims.

A. Summary Judgment Standard

Under Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, either "party may move for summary judgment, identifying each claim or defense—or the part of each claim or defense—on which summary judgment is sought." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56. Summary judgment is appropriate if the evidence, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, demonstrates "that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Id.; *see Celotex Corp. v.*Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986). A dispute is "genuine" if "the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party." *Anderson v. Liberty*Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986). A fact is "material" if it "might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law." Id.

The moving party bears the initial burden of showing that there is no genuine dispute of material fact and that it is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 323. If the moving party does not bear the ultimate burden of persuasion at trial, it nevertheless "has both the initial burden of production and the ultimate burden of persuasion on a motion for summary judgment." Nissan Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Fritz Companies, Inc., 210 F.3d 1099, 1102 (9th Cir. 2000). "In order to carry its burden of production, the moving party must either produce evidence negating an essential element of the nonmoving party's claim or defense or show that the nonmoving party does not have enough evidence of an essential element to carry its ultimate burden of persuasion at trial." Id. If the moving party meets its burden of production, the burden then shifts to the nonmoving party to identify specific facts from which a factfinder could reasonably find in the nonmoving party's favor. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 324; Anderson, 477 U.S. at 250.

The court is "required to view the facts and draw reasonable inferences in the light most favorable to the [nonmoving] party." Scott v. Harris, 550 U.S. 372, 378 (2007). The court may not weigh evidence or make credibility determinations in analyzing a motion for summary judgment because these are "jury functions, not those of a judge." Anderson, 477 U.S. at 249-50. Nevertheless, the nonmoving party "must do more than simply show that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts Where the record taken as a whole could not lead a rational trier of fact to find for the nonmoving party, there is no genuine issue for trial." Scott, 550 U.S. at 380 (internal quotation marks omitted) (quoting Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586-87 (1986)).

B. Negligence

The Jones Act permits a "seaman injured in the course of employment" to recover damages against his or her employer. 46 U.S.C. § 30104. To establish a claim for negligence under the Jones Act, the plaintiff must establish (1) the employer's duty to provide a safe work environment to its seaman employee; (2) breach of that duty; (3) the employer's awareness of the unsafe condition; and (4) a causal link, however slight, between the employer's breach and the seaman's injury. Ribitzki v. Canmar Reading & Bates, Ltd. P'ship, 111 F.3d 658, 662-64 (9th Cir. 1997); Ili v. Am. Seafoods Co., LLC, 357 F. App'x 807, 808-09 (9th Cir. 2009) (citing Ribitzski, 111 F.3d at 662-64)). "[T]he employer must have notice and the opportunity to correct an unsafe condition before liability will attach." Havens v. F/T Polar Mist, 996 F.2d 215, 218 (9th Cir. 1993).

Mr. Gervais first argues that Mr. Corcoran's own testimony shows that, contrary to the allegations in his complaint, he was never "forced to wear boots which were continually wet inside" and that Mr. Gervais did provide "reasonable accommodation with which to dry the inside of [his] footwear." (Mot. at 11-12 (quoting Compl. ¶¶ 6-7).) The court agrees. Mr. Corcoran testified that the Vessel had a working diesel stove that was constantly on and that he used to dry his boots; that he never ran out of dry socks; that he was given opportunities to change his socks during the day; that no one ever stopped him from changing his socks; and that his "boots were never too wet." (Corcoran Dep. at 38:8-24, 41:13-42:7, 47:19-23.) Indeed, Mr. Corcoran acknowledges in his response that his attorney did "not fully understand[] the nature of Mr. Corcoran's complaints until his deposition" and that "jellyfish in his boots was the problem, not [his] boots themselves." (Resp. at 2 (citing Corcoran Dep. at 47-49).) Therefore, the court GRANTS Mr. Gervais's motion for summary judgment on Mr. Corcoran's claim that his injuries were caused by Mr. Gervais's negligence in forcing Mr. Corcoran to wear wet boots and failing to provide "reasonable accommodation" for drying his boots.

Mr. Corcoran now argues that his negligence claim is based on the jellyfish getting into his boots, rather than being forced to wear wet boots. (Resp. at 2.) He contends that the presence of the jellyfish is evidence that Mr. Gervais failed to provide Mr. Corcoran a "reasonably safe place to work." (Id.) But Mr. Corcoran also states that Mr. Gervais did nothing wrong to cause the issues with his feet, and he provides no further detail about

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

21

how Mr. Gervais breached any duty he owed to Mr. Corcoran relating to the jellyfish.

(Corcoran Dep. at 73:13-24; see generally Resp.) Because Mr. Gervais has not met his burden to present evidence that Mr. Gervais breached any duty to him with respect to the presence of jellyfish and his injuries, the court GRANTS Mr. Gervais's motion for summary judgment on Mr. Corcoran's claim that his injuries were caused by Mr. Gervais's negligence relating to the presence of jellyfish on the Vessel.

C. Unseaworthiness

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

21

22

The admiralty doctrine of unseaworthiness is a form of strict liability that requires the owner of a vessel to ensure that the vessel and its appurtenant equipment and appliances are "reasonably fit for her intended service." Usner v. Luckenbach Overseas Corp., 400 U.S. 494, 499 (1971). To establish a claim for unseaworthiness, a plaintiff must establish: (1) seaman status triggering the warranty of seaworthiness; (2) an injury arising from the condition of the ship or its crew; (3) the equipment used was not reasonably fit for its intended use; and (4) proximate causation between the unseaworthy condition and the injury. Ribitzki, 111 F.3d at 664-65; Ili, 357 F. App'x at 809 (citing Ribitzski, 111 F.3d at 664). An unseaworthiness claim may arise from any number of circumstances including a defective physical condition, however temporary; a failure to properly maintain the ship or appurtenances thereto; an unfit or insufficient crew; or an improper method of operation. Usner, 400 U.S. at 499; Am. President Lines, Ltd. v. Welch, 377 F.2d 501, 504 (9th Cir. 1967). Although the duty to "furnish a vessel and appurtenances reasonably fit for their intended use" is absolute, the "standard is not perfection" and the owner is not "obligated to furnish an accident-free ship." Mitchell v. Trawler Racer, Inc., 362 U.S. 539, 550 (1960).

Mr. Corcoran's own testimony negates his claim that the Vessel was not reasonably fit for its intended use. With respect to his claim based on wet boots, Mr. Corcoran testified that Mr. Gervais provided a means to dry boots on the Vessel and that his boots were never too wet. With respect to his claim based on jellyfish stings, Mr. Corcoran testified the Vessel's set up was "really high," meaning that the jellyfish would go above his knees and get into his boots. (Id. at 72:15-73:7, 73:25-74:4.) But he also testified that the Vessel was set up that way so that it could hold more salmon and that there was nothing else wrong with the Vessel that caused the problems with his feet; and he presents no evidence that would support a finding that the Vessel was not reasonably fit for its for intended use. (Id. at 72:25-74:4; see generally Resp.); see Ribitzki, 111 F.3d at 664-65. Instead, he makes the bare assertion in his brief, unsupported by evidence, that the deck of the Vessel was not safe. (Resp. at 2.) Because Mr. Corcoran has not met his burden on summary judgment to present evidence from which a reasonable factfinder could conclude that the Vessel was not reasonably fit for its intended use, the court GRANTS Mr. Gervais's motion for summary judgment on Mr. Corcoran's unseaworthiness claims.

D. Leave to Amend

Mr. Corcoran asks for leave to amend his complaint. (Resp. at 2.) Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 16(b)(4) provides that "[a] schedule may only be modified for good cause and with the judge's consent." Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(4). Here, Mr. Corcoran has

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

21

1 made no effort to establish that good cause exists to extend the deadline for amending 2 pleadings. To the contrary, his attorney states only that he "acknowledges not fully 3 understanding the nature of Mr. Corcoran's complaints until his deposition." (Resp. at 4 2.) That deposition took place on September 29, 2022—nearly three weeks before the 5 October 22, 2022 amended pleadings deadline. (See Merriam Decl., Ex. 1 at 1; Sched. 6 Order.) The discovery deadline passed on December 19, 2022, and trial is set for April 7 17, 2023, less than three months from now. (See Sched. Order.) In addition, the court 8 concludes that amendment of Mr. Corcoran's negligence and unseaworthiness claims to 9 include allegations relating to the presence of jellyfish would be futile for the reasons set 10 forth above in its analysis of Mr. Gervais's motion. See Allen v. City of Beverly Hills, 11 911 F.2d 367, 373 (9th Cir. 1990) (including undue delay and futility among the factors 12 to consider when determining whether to grant leave to amend a complaint). Because 13 Mr. Corcoran has not established good cause to extend the deadline for amending 14 pleadings, the court DENIES Mr. Corcoran's request for leave to amend his complaint. 15 IV. CONCLUSION 16 For the foregoing reasons, the court GRANTS Mr. Gervais's motion for summary 17 judgment (Dkt. # 28) and DISMISSES Mr. Corcoran's claims with prejudice. 18 Dated this 19th day of January, 2023. 19 m R. Rlit 20 JAMES L. ROBART 21 United States District Judge